

Falling Stars

The world had been waiting, breathless as supposedly the largest meteor shower and history was to occur. Scientists were stunned however as the day before the shower stars throughout the sky were vanishing from the night sky by the dozens. The next day could only be described as the most beautiful disaster to ever happen. The meteors, revealed to be small crystals, fell from the sky at blinding speeds...not dissolving in the atmosphere and instead slamming into the earth with shocking force. All over the planet these crystals tore into the crust. They tore through anything in their path on their descent and when they finally landed crystals grew from the crash sites. Our story begins in a small American town...where a boy who had seemingly been struck by one of these crystals, has been found unconscious in the woods.
